White Coat, Black Girl: A Personal and Professional Reckoning with Racism in Medicine

Medicine often presents itself as objective and neutral, yet racial inequities remain deeply embedded in its structures, cultures, and everyday practices. Further, speaking about these realities is frequently ignored and dismissed. In this talk, I weave my lived experience of anti-Black racism in clinical and academic work to examine how racism shapes medical training, professional identity, and patient care.

Drawing on personal narrative as a Black woman in medicine alongside evidence and practice-based examples, this talk explores how credibility, belonging, and authority are racialized within medical spaces. The presentation challenges the myth of neutrality in healthcare and reframes anti-racism as essential clinical and ethical work rather than an optional moral stance. Participants will be invited to reflect on their own positionality and will leave with concrete strategies to engage in anti-racist practice at the individual, interpersonal, and institutional levels.

Dr. Eniola Salami is an Assistant Clinical Professor in the Department of Family Medicine at the University of Alberta and the inaugural Black Health Lead for the University of Alberta Undergraduate Medical Program.

She is a family physician working in a full service academic clinical practice in South Edmonton. Dr. Eniola Salami has an MD from the University of Alberta, and a BHSc with a concentration in Health & Society from the University of Calgary.

She is a member of several national and provincial boards, and is a passionate advocate for anti-racist clinical education and Black health.

ABSTRACTS

Panel 1: Advancing Anti-Racism at KPU: Projects and Resources

1. Untold Stories: Conversations with KPU Students, Alumni and Staff About Inclusion, Belonging and Accessibility in The Workplace and Classroom

- Lindsay Wood, Applied Communications Instructor, Melville School of Business
- Usha Gunatilake, Student, Faculty of Arts

Learn about a new KPU Open Educational Resource that amplifies the voices of marginalized KPU students and educators and explores themes of inclusion, belonging, accessibility, and allyship in classrooms and workplaces. Through personal narratives, case studies, and reflective activities, this resource invites readers to listen deeply, engage in honest dialogue, and take meaningful action toward equity. It is both a call to change systems and a celebration of student agency, offering hope and insight for anyone committed to creating inclusive learning and working environments

2. Translanguaging in Action as an Anti-Racist Practice

- Shaila Shams, Learning Strategist, (PhD Candidate, ABD), The Learning Centre
- Dr. Alice Macpherson, Learning Strategist, The Learning Centre
- Muskandeep Kaur, Peer Tutor
- Manvinder Rayat, Peer Tutor

The common assumption in post-secondary learning that students should only think in the language of instruction is a complex form of systemic racism and discrimination. Translanguaging is a way to challenge this assumption with positive actions that support individual learning while helping the learner acquire fluency in a new language.

Using the strengths of Peer Tutors in The Learning Centres at KPU with coaching from faculty Learning Strategists, we encourage learners to think deeply about course content through a multiple level approach that embodies “Where Thought Meets Action.”

3. Anti-Racist Pedagogy Tool Kit: Designing for Equitable Learning Environments

- Dr. Nishan Perera, Director, Educational Development, Teaching & Learning Commons
- Daniel Benzimra, Teaching & Learning Strategist, Teaching & Learning Commons

This presentation introduces practical ways to use Tools from the KPU Anti-Racist Pedagogy Tool Kit to support designing equitable and inclusive learning experiences for all students and instructors. How to use the Tool Kit, and with specific focus on one or two Tools, will be explored with actionable strategies and key takeaways that are easy to implement and maintain.
