Rationale for why students need to be on campus: Student support liaison (SSL) is a program that provides support to students who are struggling in clinical. The issue varies from unable to perform specific skills, unable to communicate effectively, lack of critical thinking/reasoning, unable to organize or prioritize. SSL works collaboratively with the clinical instructor and meets with the student one on one in simulation to provide support and help the student transition into clinical. With the increase workload of the clinical instructors due to the lack of hands on labs, the SSL role is very beneficial to support faculty and struggling students. The simulation lab provides a realistic environment that supports students learning in a safe environment. During simulation students are able to go through the motions of being in clinical, reflect on their practice and meet expected learning outcomes.
